NUMBER 36.

An Ex-Bourbon At The Foot Of The Rocky Mountains.

Mr. B. M. Tucker, formerly of Cynthiana, Ky., writes a letter from right at the foot of the Rocky Mountains, to the Cynthiana Democrat from which we take the following:

"I am stopping at present with Joseph P. Giltner, formerly of Bourbon county, Ky., right at the foot of the Rockies, in the valley 12 miles north of Denver. This section is considered the most health resorting climate in the United States. The altitude being about 5,280 feet higher than in Kentucky, the air fresh from the snow capped mountains is pure and invigorating. Thousands of invalids especially those with consumption are flocking here seeking health and are generally improved or restored. It is estimated that 90 per cent. of those who come here find in a year or two perfect restoration to a normal condition. Mr. Giltner came here two years ago badly afflicted with what they call it here 'the bugs' (consumption) and is now sound and well, weighs 180 pounds and can do a good day's work. His good wife, a daughter of Mr. James Harvey Moore, of Georgetown, Ky., and a niece of the late Hon. J. Quincy Ward, weighs 170 pounds and is the picture of health. She says 'I wish I could step in on my people in Kentucky today.' She will visit them in January or February next. A more genial or happy family I never met and they have not forgotten their old time Kentucky hospitality. We are feasting on Jersey butter, ranch eggs and other good edibles to our hearts' content."

Now Going On.

Those who are wise and need a refrigerator will put in a sealed bid on the handsome refrigerator on display in Wheeler's window. No one knows what the other bids are, put in your bid and you may get the refrigerator for a song. 31tf

Ex-Bourbon Thriving.

A daily newspaper of recent date, printed at Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, contains a lengthy notice of a million-dollar contract let for new buildings. Among the builders is C. Frank Colcord, formerly of Bourbon, who contracts for an eight-story office building to be erected on a Grand avenue site that cost $102,000. Mr. Colcord is a nephew and heir of the late Frank Colcord, of this county.

After The Sheriff's.

At Frankfort, on behalf of the State Fiscal Court, the Attorney General filed suits aggregating over $21,000 against former Sheriff's of Owen county for amounts which it is claimed these officials owe the State. The suit was brought as a result of the recent investigation and report handed in by State Inspector and Examiner Hines, in which he claims that certain amounts which were due the Commonwealth from Owen county had been held back by former Sheriffs June Gayle, P. A. Alexander and W. P. Swope.

June Brides.

Ask your husband for a gas stove when he comes home to dinner, you will be cool and sweet and dinner ready instead of hot, tired and dirty and dinner late.

Carried Life Insurance.

The late Dr. J. Kirtley Jameson carried $6,000 life insurance, which he bequeathed to his parents, Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Jameson.

Extra Fine Export Cattle.

Messrs. John B. Kennedy and L. R. M. Bedford, two of Bourbon county's oldest and best farmers, shipped to the Pittsburg market last week a car load each of the finest export cattle that has been produced in Bourbon this year. Each car contained 19 head.

Those shipped by Mr. Kennedy weighed on an average 1,335 pounds, while those shipped by Mr. Bedford, being older cattle, weighed an average of 1,460 pounds.

Both Mr. Kennedy and Mr. Bedford are past eighty years of age and are two of Bourbon's wealthiest and most prominent citizens.

Committee Meeting Called.

Judge W. A. Lee, chairman of the Fifth Appellate Judicial District, has called a meeting of the Fifth Appellate District Committee at the Capital Hotel at Frankfort for Friday, June 14, 1907, at 12 o'clock noon for the purpose of fixing the time, place and manner of nominating a candidate for Appellate Judge to fill out the unexpired term of Judge Cantrill.

Awarded $13,134 For Arm.

In the Federal Court at Catlettsburg, John T. Hazelrigg, of Mt. Sterling, was given a verdict of $13,134 damages against the Norfolk and Western railroad. Hazelrigg was in employ of the road, and about two years ago had his right arm cut off at the shoulder, while coupling cars. He claimed that negligence on the part of the engineer caused the accident.

Well-Known Woman Dies.

Mrs. Mary Viley, one of the best known women in Lexington, died suddenly at her home Friday morning, death coming almost without warning. She was found by her husband in an unconscious condition, and never rallied.

She was a most excellent woman, and was step-mother of Mrs. Chas. R. James, of this city.

Big Live Stock Deals.

One of the largest, if not the largest, deal in live stock ever made in Bourbon was closed Friday when Thomas McClintock & Sons, of Millersburg, sold to Chicago parties, for June, July and August delivery, 20,000 lambs. The deal involves $120,000.

Joe Frakes, on Friday, bought from Mr. James E. Clay, for S. & S. Company, 1,000 lambs at $7.75 per hundred. This is the highest price ever paid for lambs in Bourbon county.

Mt. Sterling Commercial Club.

The following is a special sent to the 'dailie' from Mt. Sterling:

"Realizing that a Commercial Club is necessary for the improvement of the city, an effort will be made here next week to perfect an organization here with every business man a member. It is the intention in case the club is organized, to go after a branch line of the Louisville & Nashville railroad from Paris to Mt. Sterling, and it is believed if a united effort is made the road can be secured, as well as a number of factories which desire to locate in this city."

Frank Leases Farm.

Dr. Arnold Frank, the representative of Emperor William of Germany, who has been in Kentucky several weeks buying horses for German army officers, has leased of William M. Fields his farm on the Newtown pike for one year, with the option of buying it within a year at a stipulated price.

Terrible Cloud Burst.

Twenty-one lives were lost Saturday morning when a cloudburst struck the little town of Gradyville, in Adair county, and it may be that more bodies will be found in the wreckage of the houses swept away. A wall of water swept down the narrow banks of a small creek and overwhelmed those houses which were built close to the stream. In the path of the cloudburst fences were washed away and growing crops torn up, fields being left entirely bare. State Senator Nell was the only one of his family to escape death, his wife and five children being drowned or killed.

Your personality is a great asset.

A plain black suit is dressy, so is a fancy check or stripe, but the appearance of the man who wears any style or color of suit is materially improved by a fancy vest.

It will give you a prosperous look, improve your personality, in short, a fancy vest is a valuable asset—not an expense.

"R. & W" Vests fit right and the styles are unique—try this season's new model and you have increased your value.

Most young men don't go to College, but they do like the way the College man dresses. If you have missed the chance of taking a degree in art or science, you can easily add many degrees to your appearance with College Brand Clothes. They confer the right to "B. S."—"Bachelor of Style."

PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.Not "Impressive."

The Wall Street Journal says: "The fate of the insurance officials whose delinquencies were exposed in the great investigation conducted by Governor Hughes in an impressive warning to all trustees of other people's money who may be tempted into paths of speculation and manipulation. Exile, disgrace and indictment have been their portion."

Let us see. McCurdy and Hyde are in exile, McCall died in disgrace, several indictments have been returned against obscure officials and clerks, while the insurance business continues in the hands of men who manipulate it for personal profit. Certainly there is no very "impressive warning" in a situation where the man to whose political committee thousands of dollars of these trust funds were traced is promoted to be secretary of the treasury.

Foraker Not Unhappy.

"Political sentiment is the same in Ohio as it is in Pennsylvania," says the Philadelphia Inquirer, Republican, "and it finds expression in the endorsement of the policies of President Roosevelt. No candidate who does not recognize these policies and who can not be depended upon to carry them out can be nominated at the republican national convention. It is because Senator Foraker is regarded as representing the opposition to the principles for which President Roosevelt stands that he is having such a hard time in his own state."

But Senator Foraker is not having "such a hard time" in Ohio so far as his senatorial aspirations are concerned. He seems to be getting on very well and it is noticeable that Secretary Taft's friends show no disposition to interfere with Foraker's re-election to the Senate.

What is there about Republican reform pretensions that they permit the reformer to uphold the Roosevelt policies on the one hand and to acquiesce in the election to the Senate of men, who, like Foraker, according to the reformer's testimony, are "regarded as representing the opposition to the principles for which President Roosevelt stands?"

Tariff Reform.

The New York World says that the Republican National convention "in spite of the reactionary standpoint elements, will declare for tariff revision of some kind or another," and the World asks, "What then will be left to the Democrats?"

The editor of the World does not for one moment believe that any "tariff revision" declaration, made by the Republican national convention will mean a revision of the tariff for the benefit of public interests.

Whatever fair promise and oily words the Republican national convention may employ there will still be left for the Democrats the duty of revising the tariff for the benefit of the many and the destruction of the shelter afforded the trusts.

There will yet be left to the Democrats the duty of holding aloft the genuine banner of tariff reform.

It is strange that with all of its boasted contempt for buncombe the New York World imagines that a tariff revision plank adopted by a party driving its campaign fund from the beneficiaries of a high protective tariff will command the respect of the American people.

First Test Of Power.

The first test of the power of the Interstate Commerce Commission to control railroad rates under the new law has been decided in favor of the Commission by the U. S. Supreme court. The case involved an advance in rates on lumber from the South to Ohio river points, and the Commission issued orders forbidding the enforcement of the advanced rates, which the Court has now decided were unreasonable.

A "Practical" Politician.

The question whether Tom Lawson has made peace with the "Frenzied Financiers" is not so much in doubt since he has declared "that Mr. Roosevelt is absolutely sure," of being "the next President of the United States." That is the position of nearly all the frenzied financiers for they have taken the President at his own word to Mr. Harriman as being a "practical" politician. Practical politics makes all Republicans look alike to most of us.

Built On Blood.

The industrial prosperity of the United States is built upon blood. This statement, taken literally, in all that it says or infers, may be verified in the list of disasters to American workers. It is said by tabulators of statistics that 500,000 persons are killed or wounded in American industries every year. The slaughter of a great war insignificant beside this, yet we view this every-day killing and wounding as a matter of course and something altogether unavoidable.

It is surprising, indeed, with that equanimity we hear and read of mine and shop casualties, say nothing of railroad disasters. We are no longer affected, except perhaps momentarily, when the news dispatches tell of a score of men smothered in the choke damp of a coal mine or torn to pieces by a gas explosion; we read with but a passing feeling of horror of girls killed in a mill holocaust; we pass by with no particular comment the report detailing the fate of a dozen men crushed under a fall of quarry stone; we read how men doing their regular work in the various industries which make the nation great are crushed or burned or mangled to death and dwell but briefly on the horror of their fate, forgetting it the next moment.

In such case, familiarity breeds indifference. We are so accustomed to these things that we are calloused. We are so surfeited with horror that we no longer know what the word means, and shall not know until our prospective is changed. Were we to look upon a war in which a hundred men were killed or wounded in a year we should feel a lively sense of interest and dread. At five times that number of Americans killed or maimed while earning their daily bread, we who are fortunate look with almost utter unconcern. Strange as it may seem, the very repetition of disaster has blinded us to its consequences and importance. Were we to view our myriad casualties in their proper perspective, there would be an awakening and an immediate end to the criminal neglect which causes a large portion of them.

Tariff Tinkering.

It is amusing to notice the antics of Republican politicians on the tariff issue. Those who are talking revision are very loath to say how much reform they favor and when Congress should act. They all, however, revisionists and standpatters, agree that nothing can be done by the Congress to meet next December and that any thought of tariff tinkering must be postponed until after March 4, 1909. This procrastination is an indication of how little real reform the people may expect at the hands of a Republican Congress.

Senator Daniel Mentioned.

The papers North and South are teeming with comment favorable on Senator Daniel as an available candidate for President. Personal opinion has also been very generally quoted on the same subject of which the statement of Forrest W. Brown, a prominent lawyer of Charleston, W. Va., is a fair sample: "The Senator can have the delegation from West Virginia any time he wants it, for West Virginia is in the South again, as far as its realization that Senator Daniel would make an admirable candidate is concerned. If nominated he would run very strong in the State, for he is regarded as a clean and able man and a representative of both the old and new South. He would run strong in my part of the State. We should like to see Senator Daniel nominated for the Presidency and the tariff revised."

Radicalism.

A New York newspaper that printed an editorial entitled, "The Drift to Radicalism," is given this valuable bit of reminder by one of its readers. "And what is there in radicalism to fear? Only this: that the people in their haste and earnestness for reform shall confuse capital with privilege, legitimate business methods with monopoly. There should be no war against capital as such; but privilege—the legal power to levy tribute without rendering an equivalent—must be abolished root and branch. This is true radicalism which should be promoted by every real conservative."

What Ails You?

Do you feel weak, tired, despondent, have frequent headaches, coated tongue, bitter or bad taste in morning, "heartburn," belching of gas, acid risings in throat after eating, stomach gnaw or burn, foul breath, dizzy spells, poor or variable appetite, nausea at times and kindred symptoms?

If you have any considerable number of the above symptoms you are suffering from biliousness, torpid liver with indigestion. Only Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is made up of the most valuable medicinal principles known to medical science for the permanent cure of such abnormal conditions. It is a most efficient liver invigorator, stomach tonic, bowel regulator and nerve strengthener.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" is not a patent medicine or secret nostrum, a full list of its ingredients being printed on its bottle wrapper and attested under oath. A glance at its formula will show that it contains no alcohol, or harmful habit-forming drugs. It is a fluid extract made with pure, triple-refined glycerine, of proper strength, from the roots of the following native American forest plants, viz, Golden Seal root, Stone root, Black Cherrybark, Queen's root, Bloodroot, and Mandrake root.

The following leading medical authorities, among a host of others, extol the foregoing roots for the cure of just such ailments as the above symptoms indicate: Prof. R. Bartholow, M. D., of Jefferson Med. College, Phila.; Prof. H. C. Wood, M. D., of Univ. of Pa.; Prof. Edwin M. Hale, M. D., of Hahnemann Med. College, Chicago; Prof. John King, M. D., Author of American Dispensatory; Prof. Jno. M. Scudder, M. D., Author of Specific Medicines; Prof. Laurence Johnson, M. D., Med. Dept. Univ. of N. Y.; Prof. Finley Ellingwood, M. D., Author of Materia Medica and Prof. in Bennett Medical College, Chicago. Send name and address on Postal Card to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., and receive free booklet giving extracts from writings of all the above medical authors and many others endorsing, in the strongest possible terms, each and every ingredient of which "Golden Medical Discovery" is composed.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. They may be used in conjunction with "Golden Medical Discovery" if bowels are much constipated. They're tiny and sugar-coated.

The Onion Dodge.

"Incredible as it may seem," said the detective, "there are many shoplifters who steal by the agency of the onion. These men, before setting out upon their contemplated crimes, eat of raw onions abundantly. Then they stroll into the silversmith's or the haberdasher's or the jeweler's that they propose to rob.

"Show me those large solitaires surrounded with pigeon blood rubies, please," says the jewel thief.

"The clerk brings forth the tray of gems and, bending over it, the thief sighs with admiration. His face close to the clerk's, he sighs again. And the clerk's nostrils quiver, and he turns away his head. The inspection of the diamonds continues for some minutes. Throughout it the thief keeps breathing hard, the clerk keeps turning his head away, and hence it is no wonder, at the day's end, that a couple of costly rings are missing."—New York Press.

Her Wisdom.

"Girls!" quietly called old but eminently astute Aunt Broadhead. "Ma'am?" they replied as they fluttered obediently to her.

"Always remember, girls, that when a man professes to have a fatherly interest in you his own daughters need it, that your own father can sufficiently supply you with it and that is the oldest of all stories save one in the world."—Puck.

An Experiment.

"Where are you going, Michael, so early?"

"Apothecary's; wife got sick last night."

"Doctor been there yet?"

"No. I found a prescription in the street when I was in town, and I'm going to have that made up and try it."—Fliegende Blätter.

Every Rexall Formula Is Public Property—And Always Has Been

This is an age of inquiry. Not since the time of the Civil War has there been so much agitation in the minds of the people on various subjects.

People "want to know" about everything.

We do not say that the public has grown skeptical—quite the contrary. We believe it is a day and age of enlightened, intelligent inquiry after facts.

Each man and each woman now-a-days wants to do his and her own thinking. They are not looking for any concentrated essence of wisdom boiled down and given to them in capsule form. They want to figure out for themselves what is right, and what is wrong, and what to do about it.

Public sentiment has forced the government of the United States to pass a law compelling medicine manufacturers to state on their labels any injurious ingredients their remedies may contain.

We believe that the Rexall remedies have had as much to do with the creation of this sentiment as any other one single element in the country.

Why?

Simply because the Rexall remedies, from their inception several years ago, started out on an entirely new line.

The first principle in the Rexall platform was one remedy for each ill—not a cure-all.

Second—no secret combinations. Every formula has always been open to the public; any one can know what he is taking when he buys Rexall—and always could.

Third—every Rexall remedy has been sold on the basis of "money back" if you are not more than satisfied.

This is frank, square, open-handed business, that's all. But it made Rexall the greatest success in the medicine world in a very short time.

Rexall "93" HAIR TONIC

The famous Rexall "93" Hair Tonic is one of the 300 Rexall Remedies. It is composed in chief of Resorcin, Beta Naphthol and Filocarpin.

Resorcin is one of the latest and most effective germ-killers discovered by science, and in connection with Beta Naphthol, which is both germicidal and antiseptic, a combination is formed which not only destroys the germs which rob the hair of its nutriment, but creates a clean and healthy condition of the scalp, which prevents the development of new germs.

Filocarpin is a well-known agent for restoring the hair to its natural color, where the loss of color has been due to a disease of the scalp. It is not a coloring matter or dye.

This combination of curatives mixed with alcohol as a stimulant, perfects the most effective remedy for hair and scalp troubles known to-day. Per bottle, 50c.

Butler Wanted the Brief.

While E. C. Carrigan was in General B. F. Butler's law office a lady came in to ask some advice. As the general was not in, Mr. Carrigan questioned her and told her he would submit her case to the general, which he did.

The general was to leave the next day for Washington and told Mr. Carrigan to prepare a brief of the lady's case and show it to him the next day.

Mr. Carrigan sat up half of the night writing his brief. The next morning, about fifteen minutes before Butler was to take his carriage for the train, he told Mr. Carrigan he would look at his brief and give his opinion.

Mr. Carrigan began by saying: "General, I have made a most careful study of this case. I have the points all in my head and can state them to you in three minutes."

"Let me have the brief," again said the general, somewhat sharply.

"But, General Butler," said Mr. Carrigan, "I had a brief prepared and intended to show it to you, but I have left it at home on my table. However, as I said, I have all the points of the case in my head."

"Young man," said the general, "the next time you have a brief to prepare for me bring me the brief and leave your head at home on the table."—Boston Herald.

Wanted to Know Too Much.

There was a series of burglaries committed in the fashionable section of Baltimore. So anxious were the police authorities to apprehend the culprits that instructions were issued to the roundsmen to exercise extraordinary vigilance during their tours of inspection.

On one occasion just after midnight an officer saw emerging noiselessly from a house in Eutaw place a young man, who hastily darted down the street. The officer made after him as rapidly as possible. When he had stopped the young man he said: "Didn't you come out of the corner house just now?"

The young fellow, though of quite a respectable air, seemed ill at ease. "I did," he answered, with some confusion.

"Do you live in that house?" sternly demanded the officer.

"That's an impertinent question," replied the young man in a tone of great indignation. "I don't see what business of yours it is so long as her father doesn't object."—Success Magazine.

Inns in Hungary.

Wayfarers in Hungary generally rejoice in very quaint titles. This one was called the Dropperin and had the usual sign outside—viz, a long pole with a wooden ring and a gigantic wine bottle suspended from it. The system of keeping the scores is primitive, but practical. The regular customers and the innkeeper each have a bit of wood called rovas, with the name of the person written on it, and every liter of wine consumed is marked by each making a notch on his respective bit of wood. When the score is paid off, both the rovas are burned. Consequently you hear the peasants inviting each other to lugyroviasmo-ra, literally drink on my "knotch stick," which sounds most comical.—"Wanderings in Hungary."

Cruel.

A cashier in the financial district of New York, on being advised by his physician to take a vacation not long ago, wrote the agent of a South American steamship line as follows: "As I am thinking of taking a trip to South America, please advise me immediately with particulars relative to rates, accommodations, and so on, to and from the various ports usually visited by tourists at this season of the year." The answer came by special delivery, marked private and confidential, "One of our steamers will sail for Valparaiso next Wednesday; shortest and quickest way out of the country."

A Test For Seasickness.

Many people have a genuine curiosity to know if they would be sea sick in case they should take an ocean voyage. An easy way to put the matter to a test is to stand before the ordinary mirror that turns in its frame and let some one move it slowly and slightly at first, gradually growing faster, while you look fixedly at your own reflection. If you feel no effect whatever from it the chances are that you can stand an ordinary sea voyage without any qualms.

Sure Cure.

"Here's a letter from a young man," said the answers to correspondents editor, "who wants to know how he can break himself of the cigarette habit." "Tell him to marry a strong minded woman who objects to it," growled the snake editor.—Chicago News.

CONSUMPTION'S WARNING

Inside facts soon become evident in outside symptoms.—Dr. G. G. GREEN.

The aid of scientific inventions is not needed to determine whether your lungs are affected. The first symptoms can be readily noted by anyone of average intelligence.

There is no disease known that gives so many plain warnings of its approach as consumption, and no serious disease that can be so quickly reached and checked, if the medicine used is Dr. Boschee's German Syrup, which is made to cure consumption.

It is in the early stages that German Syrup should be taken, when warnings are given in the cough that won't quit, the congestion of the bronchial tubes and the gradual weakening of the lungs, accompanied by frequent expectoration.

But no matter how deep-seated your cough, even if dread consumption has already attacked your lungs, German Syrup will surely effect a cure—as it has done before in thousands of apparently hopeless cases of lung trouble.

Knights Of Pythias Honor Their Dead.

Memorial services in honor of deceased members of Rathbone Lodge and A. J. Lovely Uniform Rank, Knights of Pythias, was held at the Paris cemetery at 3 o'clock p. m. Sunday and were very impressive, though rain began to fall as the head of the parade entered the beautiful city of the dead. The parade formed near the court house and promptly at 2:30 o'clock began to move with Brigadier General James E. McCracken and his staff in command, followed by the Knights of Pythias band of North Middletown. The Fourth Regiment composed of the following companies led the van: Guiding Star No. 2, Dayton, Capt. John Swift; Fellowship No. 3, Newport, Lieut. John Borchers; Covington No. 4, Capt. S. C. Shaw; Heflin No. 5, Newport, Capt. J. W. Brofield; Latonia No. 5, Capt. J. W. Stump; Friendship No. 25, Capt. W. F. Miller, and Orin No. 44, Berry, Ky., Capt. Blair.

Then followed the Second Regiment headed by the Elks' band of this city, with the following Companies Cynthiana No. 15, Capt. J. Q. Jewitt; Winchester No. 7, Capt. C. E. Bush; Lexington No. 8, Capt. W. L. Dawson and Bluegrass No. 23, Versailles, Capt. H. A. Schreiber. A. Lovely No. 34, Capt. T. M. Faries.

The Paris Military Cadets, 60 strong, Capt. J. S. Johnson, brought up the rear. The cadets are boys ranging from eight to fourteen years and wore white shirts and caps, and preceded by their own drum corps marched like veterans. The crowd at the cemetery numbered more than one thousand people. Main street from the court house to the entrance of the cemetery was lined with people afoot and in vehicles, while two special Interurban and one city car were taxed to their utmost to accommodate the crowd.

The impressive ceremonies were conducted upon an improvised platform on a knoll in the center of the cemetery. As the knights drew in position, facing the temporary mound, bedecked with evergreens and blooming flowers with a shield of beautiful roses, at the head of which rested a wooden head stone with the names of the deceased knights, Elder Carey E. Morgan stepped forward and offered a fervent prayer. A quartet composed of Mrs. Fannie Hill, and Messrs. F. P. Walker and Harry Kerslake rendered, "Some Sweet Day."

Sir Knight J. L. Earlywine then, in his usual eloquent style, paid a glowing tribute to those who had gone before, whose memories would ever live down the cycle of time and introduced the speaker of the day, Sir Knight George C. Wycoff, of Carlisle. This young orator's reputation had preceded him and well did he sustain it. He is a young man of fine address, good voice and graceful speaker. His address was appropriate and eloquent. We regret the lack of space forbids us giving it in full.

After the address Elder Carey E. Morgan then pronounced the benediction, when the lines of Sir Knights were again formed and the march to the city began.

The King Of Fiends.

Harry Orchard's cross examination probably will last through today. Orchard, Saturday, was carried through the first attempt on the life of former Gov. Peabody, of Colorado, and the killing of Detective Gregory at Denver. Attorney Richardson, for the defense, led the witness through every detail of both crimes, seeking to involve the story of the witness in doubt. Some discrepancies were developed, but in the main Orchard adhered stoutly to his original testimony. Incidentally he confess to burning a saloon and deserting his second wife.

Col. Clay Has Successful Year.

Not in years has Col. E. P. Clay, of this county, member of the State Racing Commission and owner of Runnymede stud, been so fortunate with the foals at his farm as he has been this spring.

At the farm are sucklings which are brothers to such noted racers as Six Shooter, Kentucky Beau, Running Water, Yankee Girl, Thirty Third and many others, which have done their part toward making turf history.

The youngsters sent from Col. Clay's farm to the sales ring have always been among the highest priced yearlings to be sold so that next year he will have an exceptionally nice lot to go under the hammer.

So far there have been thirty-one foals at Runnymede and a fair proportion of them have been colts. With many breeders colts are more desirable than fillies, but the fillies by Sir Dixon, and Imp. Star Shoot are being sought after so keenly for brood mares that it matters little to Col. Clay whether the foals are colts or fillies.

The Blue Grass Seed Crop.

With a few days dry weather the blue grass seed harvest will be on, it being estimated that 200 seed harvesters will be at work in the country. The price at which the market will open has not been announced, dealers being busy getting a line on the probable supply of new seed. It is believed the opening price will be around 50 cents per bushel.

One large transaction in blue grass seed was consummated Saturday, but not upon a stated price per bushel, when W. B. Woodford a prominent farmer residing on the Winchester pike, contracted with W. A. Thomason of North Middletown, to gather the seed from 1,000 acres of his fine blue grass farm, Thomason to receive two-fifths of the product. Mr. Woodford then sold to the firm of Chas. S. Brent & Bro. the remaining three-fifths for $1,750.

The firms and farmers who contemplate running seed harvesters are confronted with the problem of securing men to man machines, it requiring two men to each machine.

Those who will extensively operate machines are Edward Burke, 10 machines; C. J. Daniels, 13; R. B. Futchcraft, 20, and Stuart & O'Brien, 15.

Elder Jonah and The Whale.

Elder J. W. McGarvey, President of the Bible College of Kentucky University, Lexington, will be called on soon to give his deposition in a law suit it St. Louis in which the defendant will attempt to prove by Mr. McGarvey's evidence, that the Biblical story of Jonah and the whale is true.

Junior Assembly Dance.

The Junior Assembly dance at Elks' Hall Friday evening was a brilliant society event. The grand march was led by Miss Helen Davis and Mr. W. R. Swearingen. Those present were: Misses Helen Davis, Louise Davis, Henrietta Taylor, Virginia Sullivan, Virginia Christian, Gladys Talbot, Elizabeth Bayless, Elia Kriener, Maymie Shropshire, Louise Grinnan, Amelia Leer, Grace Appleton, of Lexington; Corine Collins, Victoria Redmon, Mae Bramblett, Rena Crosdale, Clara Belle O'Neil, Edna Turney, Maymie Price, of Midway; Edna Graves, of Lexington; Messrs. Rick Thomas, Robert Stoner, John Kriener, C. O. Boardman, Emmett Redmon, J. O. Waller, William Woodford, W. Ray Clarke, Charles Fithian, Frank Ford, Harry Howell, of Mt. Sterling; Logan Howard, Raymond McMillan, Harry Collins, Robert Garrett of Versailles; Harry J. Horton, William Taylor, Charles E. Butler, Jr., Charlton Clay, Homer Herring and Major Smith of Georgetown; George W. Clay, W. R. Swearingen, Hugh Ferguson, Davis Weeks, Robert Ferguson, Amos Turney, Louis Taylor, Woodford Daniels, Walker Nelson, Grover Baldwin, Bennett Thomas, W. J. Cummings of Knoxville, Tenn.; C. O. Wilmoth, Jason Redmon, George Wyatt, White Varden, Edward Pritchard, R. J. Bortton, J. G. Mitchell, W. K. Ferguson, Bowen Ratcliff and Mrs. George Kriener.

Chaperones were Dr. and Mrs. W. C. Ussery, Mr. and Mrs. Amos Turney, Mr. and Mrs. James Ferguson, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hall, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Miller and Mr. and Mrs. Swift.

Champ. The Daughters of the Confederacy prepared elegant refreshments which were served shortly after the midnight hour in the basement of the court house. The music was Saxton of Lexington.

Bourbon Circuit Court.

The June term of the Bourbon Circuit Court was convened yesterday morning with Judge Robert L. Stout on the bench. Commonwealth's Attorney Robert B. Franklin was present to take care of the Commonwealth docket.

There will be four murder cases to try at this term, viz: Julian Throckmorton, Nat Gay, Will Coleman and Homer Wilson, the latter three being negroes. The present term promises to be a very busy one and Judge Stout seems inclined to keep the law years moving from start to finish.

The following grand jury men were called and sworn: V. K. Shipp, foreman; Frank Wilmott, Jake Jacoby, O. C. Hedges, Simpson Butler, Earl Sellers, T. T. Templin, Lee Cox, J. B. DeJarnett, H. H. Chism, Cefior Mann and W. J. Peterson.

Judge Stout's instructions were short but impressive and to the point. He said that from reports from officers the conditions here were good, still he desired to call their attention to the liquor traffic, selling to minors, etc., and to gambling in all its forms. He instructed them to have all city and county officers summoned before them to ascertain if they had been doing their duty in ferreting out gambling, that it was the duty of the officers to be detectives on this line, and if any of them had failed to do their duty they should be indicted.

He further said that he was not an alarmist, but the farmers being unable to get hands to assist with their crops was causing a feeling of uneasiness in this section, and he urged them to make a vigorous fight against the vagrants in this community; show able bodied men that they either had to work or answer to the law.

He was listened to with closest attention by the jurors, who after he had concluded, retired to their jury room and began their arduous duties.

It had been a busy day at General Alton's headquarters. Indeed, those were all busy days in the weeks that immediately followed the battle of Shiloh, the taking of Island No. 10 and the later occupation by General Pope of Corinth.

In the heart of the little city of Jackson, Tenn., General Alton had established his headquarters. At his desk here, long after taps had sounded, his lights gave evidence that when the men in the ranks are asleep uneasy is still the head of the officer in command.

An orderly noiselessly entered the room where General Alton was at his desk. Silently he saluted and waited for some sign of recognition. He had to wait some minutes before General Alton, without looking up from his letters, said, "Well, orderly?"

"Colonel Curtis presents his compliments to General Alton, begs to report matters of importance and asks an immediate interview."

The general laid down his pen.
 "Show him in, orderly."

As the colonel entered General Alton rose, and the two grave faced men looked questioning at each other. In those days "matters of importance" generally stood for disaster and necessity for quick action.

"General Alton," the crisp voice of Colonel Curtis began, "a prisoner, a spy, has been arrested attempting to pass the lines. In the search in his shoes were found concealed a complete and thorough drawing of the strengthened fortifications of Corinth and papers bearing information on supplies, condition of men, etc."

The general turned to the speaker a face full of interest. "That's bad, Colonel Curtis, very bad. Tell me something of the personality of the prisoner."

"I did not see him until the papers
 had been discovered and the evidence of his being a spy established. He is a mere boy, not more than twenty years old, I am sure. He has been a soldier—of that I am convinced—and good blood runs in his veins. I think him a native of this section of Tennessee. His accent indicates that."

"You ordered the search?"

"No; Captain Lawton did."

"The specifications and papers were found in his shoes?"

"Yes, general, hidden between a false sole."

General Alton looked gravely straight in front of him. He was thinking deeply. Colonel Curtis was no sensationalist, and he had suggested a serious charge in this interview.

The specifications and detail of an important supply point within the possession of the Union forces, under careful guard and strict martial law, were now in the hands of this spy of the enemy.

LOOKED QUESTIONINGLY AT EACH OTHER.

The specifications and supply detail had been a surprise in their manner of making to this trained soldier.
 In his long experience with men General Alton had never found that untrained hands did these things well.
 The prisoner was a mere boy with no likelihood of experience or practice in this work.

"You base your opinion entirely, Colonel Curtis, on the character of the drawings and the personality of the prisoner?"

"Yes, general. I am personally convinced that the work is that of an expert with time and detail well in hand.
 This mere boy has, I believe, neither the knowledge, time nor skill to do the work and could not possibly have obtained some information contained in the papers."

Colonel Curtis waited patiently until the general finished his work and put maps and papers back into the drawer.
 He leaned back in his chair with a thoughtful, grave face. It was events like these that made the business of war so grim and dreadful.

The same thought doubtless was in the mind of both men. The general must order a court martial, which must pass a death sentence on this boy, who, after all, was doing the hardest and most undesired duty a soldier is called upon to do.

General Alton broke the silence. "I have decided, Colonel Curtis, to offer this prisoner his life on condition that he reveals all that he knows about these papers."

Colonel Curtis rose, feeling the interview was over.

"We will make the hearing at 7:30
 tomorrow morning, if you please, colonel, and I will have Captain Lawton also present. In the meantime detail a special guard for the prisoner and see that he has comfortable care.
 Good night."

The footsteps died away down the long, empty hall, and General Alton was again alone. It had been a hard day, and he was glad it was over. The gravity of this last complication made his face unusually old and worn. For some weeks strange things of this kind had come to light. Now this must prove a solution of what had never been understood.

"Can it be," he thought wonderingly,
 "that in all the world there is a man
 so base as to sell for money the information a soldier would die to preserve?"

Then he fell to thinking of the boy whose life lay in his hands and of all the stern justice of war. Involuntarily his hand rested on a letter with a northern postmark. It had come to him from Princeton that morning. Before him passed the eager, pleading words of his son, urging, imploring his father to let him give up college and go to the front. "The soldier blood," the letter ran, "the blood of all the Altons, is calling to me day and night, making study impossible. I do not desire to grieve you by giving up my work without your consent, but I am no longer sure of myself. Let me do what my conscience urges me to do. When peace is declared I will take up my profession if you desire it."

He must consent, of course. Richard was a man now and must make a man's fight for the old flag. Perhaps some day in the fortunes of war his only son, his fine, brilliant Richard,
 would stand as this boy stood today—
 under the shadow of death.

The prisoner, in his well guarded tent, had spent one of those never to be forgotten nights that most of us can remember somewhere in life.
 There was little doubt of his fate, and with a strange, awed look on his young face, telling of the night's conflict, he waited for the hour of the interview.

He knew nothing of the offer to be made him and felt that it was only a preliminary of his death warrant. He longed, with a boyish longing, for his uniform to wear this morning. In that gray and all it stood for he felt he could better face the worst.

General Alton, Colonel Curtis and Captain Lawton were talking earnestly when the orderly announced the prisoner and his guard.

"How young, pitifully young," was the thought that was in their minds as the prisoner courteously saluted and stood at attention. The excitement of the moment had brought back a faint color in the cheeks and taken the weariness from the face.

General Alton faced the boy with keen scrutiny. "You understand, do you, that you are under the gravest charge in military law?" the general began, his voice full of the stern command of the soldier.

"I do, General Alton," the boy replied
 quietly.

The young officer, acting as the general's secretary, prepared to take his notes. The examination had commenced.

"What is your name?"

"Seton Dabney, suh."

"Where do you live?"

"My home is in Pulaski, suh."

The general paused in the examination. There was something a trifle disconcerting in the frank, boyish face strangely suggesting that other boy in a northern town, restless for the life which had brought this one to grief.

When the general spoke next his voice had lost much of the sternness and impersonality. When General Alton chose to take that tone it was difficult to resist him always.

"Mr. Dabney, may I ask, is your father's name Edwin Dabney, and was he first lieutenant in the old Sixteenth Virginia in the Mexican war?"

The prisoner looked surprised; then a smile of pleasure warmed his face.
 "Yes, suh; his name is Edwin Dabney,
 and he belonged to the old Sixteenth Virginia. It was the delight of my childhood to hear him tell those stories of army life. When the trouble came between the states I begged with all my heart to go with my father in the Ninth Tennessee. I was only eighteen and the only son, and father wished me to continue my studies at the Virginia Military Institute and so be with mother while he was away. At the end of a year he found it was no use. I could not study. I had to be a soldier."

"I was in the battle of Shiloh," the boyish voice went on, "and I did my best for honorable mention. I did not get it then, but if I could live I felt my chance would come. This attempt to gain certain details was necessary. I volunteered for the task. I knew the country well, for I had hunted all over every inch of it. Perhaps for many reasons it seemed wise to let me try, and I was given my chance. I did my best, general, and the voice broke a little, "but—I failed; that is all."

The boy stopped abruptly.

"Mr. Dabney"—it was the general speaking in the same courteous voice still—"it is a sad thing, these fortunes of war. You have only tried to do your duty, and as soldiers we must do ours.
 The plans for the fortifications of Corinth, all details of supplies, are found in your possession and you in disguise."

"Colonel Curtis, Captain Lawton and myself feel confident that the work of details is not yours or any other inexperience hand, and it was literally a matter of impossibility for you to gain without aid the information given in these papers. There has been treachery somewhere.

"In my capacity of division commander I am prepared to offer you your life on the condition that you reveal everything—names, rank and amount of bribe—for which this information was sold."

"I knew your father, Mr. Dabney.
 We were both young soldiers in the days of the old Sixteenth Virginia. I honored him greatly. I do not believe his son would do less than despise the man, whatever the needs or consideration, who sells a soldier's information."

It may be that it is a Tennessean in Union ranks either masking as a Federal soldier or half hearted in our cause. If it is the clever work of a Confederate spy (which is most unlikely), you will doubtless refuse to reveal his identity. If it is a man who has sworn loyalty to the old flag your father and I fought under together, surely you must realize how low in the scale of honor he is to do this thing.
 Reveal his name, help us to punish the traitor and take your life and its possibilities. I cannot promise you free-

"I WISH TO SPEAK TO GENERAL ALTON AT ONCE."

dom, but I do promise you shall be sent away as a prisoner of war and that I will keep you in mind in the exchange.

"You are young, and life is all before you. You are the only son of your father and mother. Think well before you leave them desolate. I hope I am a man of honor. You must be your own judge whether in this case you can in honor reveal what we ask you to. Life would not compensate you for dishonor. Be your own judge. It is only fair to tell you that if you refuse I can do nothing for you. The usual order of military law must take its course. I will give you an hour to consider the matter in all its features.
 Orderly, show Mr. Dabney into another room and order the guard to remain outside of the door. If the prisoner wishes to speak to me at any time, he is to be brought to me."

Seton Dabney bowed and saluted and passed out with the orderly. Alone in the empty room, he faced the situation. At twenty years the thought of life is sweet beyond words. He had bought for gold the information he must give his life for. The traitor was utterly unworthy of his silence, but he had given his word.

Far away, over the brown fields, his eyes and thoughts traveled. His home, his mother and father and happy boy-hood passed in quick review in his surging thoughts. Could he save his life? Was this his one chance?

He had prayed for an answer. He seemed to hear his father's voice giving it in the same loving, gentle voice that was a part of his whole life, and the words were familiar with long, happy years of memories. "It is not worth while to gain a desired end by an undesired means, my son; it is not worth while for a Dabney."

"No! God helping me, no!" the boy cried aloud in his anguish. "It is not worth while!"

"Corporal!" called a voice from the room. The key turned, and the guard entered. Seton Dabney turned a set face to the soldier in blue. "I wish to speak to General Alton at once."

A moment later the prisoner stood in his old place. General Alton was now alone. He saluted and waited.

"You have made a decision, Mr. Dabney? Think well," the older man went on, "before you answer. There is still time to consider. You can extend the hour."

Clear and strong came the answer:
 "I thank you, General Alton; I do not wish more time. It is safer for me to answer now. I have decided."

The head was raised with a little gesture of pride. "I am an American and a Tennessean. I must die so that neither will be ashamed of me. I cannot give any information."

The words were said simply. He hesitated one moment and then spoke again: "Allow me, General Alton, to say the persons you claim sold me information were not Tennesseans. I would have shot them myself had such been the case. I thank you for your kindness to me. I could not break my word."

General Alton rose. He came to the boy and held out his hand. "There was a strange look of sorrow in his face."
 "My boy," he said softly, "some day
 perhaps your father and I will meet again. You did not get your honorable mention that day at Shiloh. You have won it now."

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable.
 For a great many years doctors pro-

Gasoline For Weeds.

People everywhere are groping around for a remedy to prevent the further spread of dandelions and docks. Digging them out by the roots does not seem to count. Like a joint snake they keep on growing. A reader who claims to know says that the best method of destroying dandelions, docks, plantains and other noxious weed pests is to fill any common oil can, such as are used for machinery, with gasoline, then squirt a teaspoonful into the top or heart of the plant. It is claimed that there will be no resurrection of the plant after that.

Coal oil is also good in the same way, but a larger quantity may be necessary.

The Unicorn.

The unicorn was one of the fabled monsters of antiquity. It was, according to a summary of the opinions of several of the old time writers, a beast about the size of a common horse, but with very short legs. The people of the middle ages believed in the existence of three kinds of unicorns—the magnificent white unicorn, which had a purple face and blue eyes and a single horn a yard in length; the eglosserion, which resembled a gigantic deer and had a very sharp horn growing from the middle of the forehead; and the monoceros, or common unicorn. The white unicorn's horn was of three different colors—white at the lower part, black as ebony in the middle and red at the point. Common unicorns were said to have had horns about eighteen inches in length, but so strong that they could easily kill an elephant.

Clock Inscriptions.

In former times it was the custom of clockmakers to inscribe on the dial plates of their clocks quaint verses, one of the most common being the following:

I serve thee here with all my might
To tell the hours by day, by night.
Therefore example take by me
To serve thy God as I serve thee.

Another favorite inscription was "Tempus Fugit" or "Time Flies," and thereby hangs a tale. A well known English clockmaker who flourished toward the close of the last century, on being asked by a customer whether a certain clock was of home manufacture, replied: "Oh, certainly. Don't you see the name, sir—'Tummas Fugit'? I often have his clocks through my hands."

Old World
And New.

.....By W. S. ODLIN.

Copyright, 1907, by Homer Sprague.

"He looks as if he were one of the statues, just a part of this wonderful picture of the old Italy and the new rolled into one," mused Penelope Gardner. "He is really more than life size—six feet four if he is an inch."

Her aunt, Mrs. Hammell, swung around sharply.

"Who? Oh, that guard? It is his helmet, my dear child, and his high heeled boots. Wouldn't you think he'd be ashamed to pose like that at the head of the grand staircase? Did you ever see so much gilt braid and shiny leather on one human being?"

Mrs. Hammell's voice had executed a gradual crescendo, and Penelope reached forth a protesting hand.

"Don't speak so loud, auntie, dear. He might understand."

But the great, square shouldered figure in glittering uniform stood as impassive as the knight in the old Gobel tapestry before which Mrs. Hammell stood enraptured, though she continued to criticize the king's guard.

"That's just the difference between our soldiers and what we see abroad. Every one of our lads holds possibilities of doing big things. Foreign soldiers are mere puppets."

Penelope replied with conviction: "I don't agree with you. That man has the face, the bearing, of one who will some day do things that are worth while. He makes me think of that tapestry knight, setting out to fight for his true love."

Mrs. Hammell gasped and closed her Biederker with a snap.

"My dear Penelope, I am amazed! If you behave this way over the first handsome man you see in uniform, how will you feel by the time we have attended a few receptions and met the real nobility, rising young diplomats and all that sort of thing?"

"Thoroughly disgusted, I presume," said Penelope coolly, "and I hope we shall not go to any receptions where tiny men, with waxed mustaches and mincing steps, will look through my back to daddy's newly acquired bank account. It is because that man is so big, so strong and looks as if he could move heaven and earth to achieve for the woman he loved that I was studying him. It is so seldom that I meet a man whom I could look up to," ended Penelope, with a sigh for her five feet eleven inches of graceful slenderness. "I was considering him only as an abstract quantity, a hypothetical man, so to speak."

"I should hope so," was her aunt's indignant reply. "Why, these special guards of the king are gathered in the north of Italy solely for their height, the guidebook says, and no doubt he was found grubbing in some wretched farm or vineyard. In New York he would be working in the subway."

Penelope turned and started to cross the great throne room where through an open window the soft Italian sunlight beckoned to her. The martial figure at the entrance so close to the Gobel tapestry had not moved the half of an inch, but above the gold braid on his collar and rising up the peak of his helmet was an unmistakable flash.

Penelope paused, frozen in her tracks, but the man looked straight ahead. She crossed to the window, resting her head wearily on her gloved hand. Her glance traveled over the great courtyard of the palace, while Mrs. Hammell completed her tour of the tapestry hung walls.

"He understood English—every word we said. How intolerably stupid of us! And auntie said he probably grubbed on a farm! No wonder these foreigners think we Americans are rude. We are so secure and snug in our ignorance of their language that we cannot believe they understand ours."

The sunlight waned, and Penelope knew that out on the Appian way tender amethyst shadows were settling. Why could not her aunt be satisfied with Rome's beautiful outdoor life, its drives and walks? Why must she spend days and days in dusty churches and hideously garish palaces? She looked back into the room. Lovely shadows softened the gilt frames and furniture, red and blues blended into purple, and the uniformed figure right faced abruptly. He had dared to watch her as she stood thus at the window! Well, it served her right for talking about human beings as if they were statues or curios.

That night she wrote in her diary: "Spent entire afternoon in the royal palace. Tapestries remarkable, but rather boring. Bedrooms reserved for various royal guests reminded me of Waldorf-Astoria. Were not permitted to enter royal suit, of course, but heard laughter of royal children through folding doors, and a hardy gurdy playing in what must have been the nursery. Italy is a place of disillusion. The natives are learning English, the better to do you, my dear!"

Penelope Gardner held off the plate card at arm's length and studied it critically.

"It's lovely, Pen—you ought to charge more for your work. You could get it, you know. Rich women love to patronize girls like you!"

"Who once ate off their plates, instead of painting plate cards for them? I think I will charge Mrs. Fitch half a dollar more for each of these cards. They were done to match her Italian villa dining room, you know."

"What I do know," pursued Penelope's caller, "is that you are going with me to Archie Hunter's studio tea this afternoon. The way you have shut yourself off from all of us, just because your father dropped money in the wrong copper mine, is execrable. Pen—there are so many who loved you in spite of your money and love you more now because you haven't any—won't you come?"

St. Anthony himself couldn't refuse you, Kathie," said Penelope, pushing aside her work. "I am going, and what is more, I shall wear my new spring frock, made over from one that last year I might have given to my maid."

Penelope could say such things without a touch of bitterness. She seemed rather to glory in the fact that she was self supporting, able to face the world which had promised her so much and then withdrawn its hypocritical smiles.

Through the open door of Hunter's studio came the click of tenniscups and a confused murmur of well bred voices.

"Jolly glad to see you," exclaimed Hunter, looking up into Penelope's gray blue eyes. Sometimes he had thought that if he could have looked down instead of up, she might have said "Yes," instead of "No."

"Isn't it a good crowd today? You see, I had something special to bring them. You haven't met Lecca yet, have you? Hello there, old chap! I want you to know Miss Gardner. You wouldn't think he was an Italian, eh, Pen?" Hunter rattled on. "Who ever heard of a six foot Italian, with blond hair at that?"

"My friend Hunter said that he would not make of me either a lion or yet a curio, but listen how he talks. Some one turned on an electric light, and before its flash the soft shadows of the studio disappeared. Penelope gave a little gasp and slowly from Lecca's face every vestige of color faded.

Penelope recovered first.

"Ah, there is Dorothy Kent pouring tea. I know it will be worth drinking." And Lecca, dazed, watched the trail of a shimmering old blue velvet skirt across Hunter's priceless rugs to the tea table. There for several minutes she stood with her back turned, full upon the group around her host and his guest of honor.

She was the center of another laughing group when she felt his compelling gaze drawing her away from the chatter. Hunter was speaking to her in a tone which the tense, nervous girl did not realize was one of remembrance.

"Lecca has been unpacking some of his traps in my farther room. He wants to know if you would like to see them. It's an honor, Pen. Even I have not seen the picture he expects to exhibit at the academy next month. He's a fine fellow. Met him last year in Paris. Awfully glad he has taken a shine to you."

Without speaking Penelope passed through the door whose hangings Lecca drew aside for her. He crossed to a canvas and threw back the drapery which hid it.

"I have named it 'The Old World and the New,'" he said simply.

Penelope looked with widening eyes. There was the tapestried wall of the throne room in all its old world colorings, faded, in places almost obscure, while against it, vital, full of grace and vigor, was the figure of an alert American girl clad in navy blue broadcloth, a velvet picture hat on her soft brown hair and a great bouquet of Roman violets at her belt.

"You see, I have done what you said—something worth while—and, having done it, I have come to show it to you and your people. I wanted you to know that you had made it possible—it is not for sale!" He drew himself up proudly, and she reached out her head pleadingly.

"And if it was—I could not buy it. Much has happened to me since the day—in the throne room. We—we have lost everything."

"Ah!" The man drew a long, deep breath. "Fate has indeed been kind; otherwise I might not speak! I was a foolish boy, unworthy son of a gifted father, proud of my authority in the royal guard and my toy uniform—laugh—until you came and the man in me cried out in shame. You said I could do it. Have I done it well enough to please you?"

She bowed her head and then raised it again. Yes, without the helmet and the high heels, he still towered above her, and then her eyes fell before his earnest gaze.

"That day—it was the same, the glance, the flash, you will forgive me, the message of love. In our country love does not wait. Yet for five years I have worked for you. All I am you have made. Today I may be artist to our king. Will you come?"

"To my king—yes."

And, though his next words were of his own country, the girl understood, for the language of love is the same in the old world and in the new.

Men as Boarders.

A woman who has made a modest competence by running a private hotel says she would rather have women as boarders than men. Perhaps they are a little inquisitive about one another's affairs, she admits, and disposed to find fault oftener than they are justified in doing. On the other hand, they usually voice their complaints either directly or in such a manner that the criticisms soon reach the landlady's ears. Men, on the contrary, don't lodge so many open complaints, but they make bitter remarks one to another, and it is seldom their remarks are repeated to the hostess until too late to offset their bad effect. This woman puts herself on record as saying that when men are inclined to be at all disagreeable they are much more difficult to deal with than women. One can always soothe a disgruntled woman by a little extra attention to their comfort, she says, but the male boarder or hotel guest who undertakes to criticize a place harshly is a hopeless case.—Kansas City Star.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, June 5.—While the warring fued leaders of Breathitt county, Ky., are fighting out their differences in court, two of the family are billing and cooing here in Washington. The bad blood existing between the families and their followers did not deter Blaine Short, a relative of the Cockrells and a strong anti-Hargis man from paying court to and winning the hand of Miss Dora South, a daughter of Mrs. Mary South, sister of Judge James Hargis. The young people, like Romeo and Juliet, did not allow the bitter animosities of their respective families to interfere with their love affairs. After a brief honeymoon spent here they will return to Breathitt county.

Pressure is being brought to bear already upon the government to have Congress appropriate in the next rivers and harbors bill an amount sufficient to permit the construction of a nine-foot channel in the Ohio River, from Pittsburgh to Cairo. The tonnage of Pittsburgh, which in 1906 exceeded 120,000,000, will be greatly increased by the existence of an adequate water route to the Gulf. In addition, the business of all the towns along the stream will be stimulated. Kentucky, Ohio and Indiana are joining hands to force this matter upon the attention of the incoming Congress, and the delegations from those three states likely will be very active in the next session. The National Rivers and Harbors Congress is steadily at work to impress upon the national legislators the necessity for framing an appropriation bill at the coming session even greater than the one that signaled the Fifty-ninth Congress. The organization's slogan is "not less than $50,000,000 a year for waterway development." If this amount is appropriated it is reasonably certain that the Ohio River will come in for a large share in its distribution.

John W. Yerkes, of Kentucky, former Commissioner of Internal Revenue, appeared this week as a practitioner in the local courts for the first time since his resignation from the government service. Mr. Yerkes appeared as counsel for the Baltimore & Ohio R. Co. in a suit against that corporation by the administrator of the estate of a young man who was run down and killed by a locomotive. The case came up in the District Supreme Court before Justice Wright.

The Geological Survey has issued a report on a most peculiar well that has been discovered in Hamilton county, O., one-half mile south of New Burlington. The well yields fresh and salt water at the same time, through pumps that are side by side. The secret of the phenomenon is found in the fact that two water-bearing beds confined between layers of limestone occur at this point, the upper carrying fresh water and the lower, water that is almost pure brine. The pipe of the fresh water pump is sixteen feet long, while that of the salt water pump is 35 feet. The brine, being heavier than the fresh water, does not mix with it, but remains at the bottom of the well. The peculiar phase of the matter is that the fresh water is of a delicious flavor and contains not the slightest trace of salt.

Prominent among the supporters of the movement for faking the George Washington University a great national institution in which special attention will be paid to advanced scientific research, are two of the men whose inventive genius has contributed to make possible what has been aptly termed the most indispensable of modern utilities—the telephone. Alexander Graham Bell, whose patent granted on February 14, 1876, was the beginning of modern telephony, and Emile Berliner, inventor of the loose contact telephone transmitter, or microphone, and of several other parts of the telephonic apparatus, are both prominent residents of Washington and have proved their interest in the effort to improve the educational facilities of the national capital by subscribing to the fund for providing a suitable site. Dr. Bell, whose figure is a familiar one in scientific circles here, recently celebrated his sixtieth birthday. Though not yet an old man, he has seen the invention on which his reputation was founded become in a generation a business and household necessity—one involving in this country alone the use of more than three million telephone stations between which upwards of five billion messages are transmitted annually in the system bearing the inventor's name. Dr. Bell has subsequently invented the photophone, and, with others, the graphophone, and he is now experimenting with an aeroplane which he believes may solve the problem of aerial navigation. Similarly, Dr. Berliner, whose contributions to telephony were made early in its history, has continued prominent among the group of Washingtonians whose activities in the field of scientific experiment and invention have made the national capital a good place for students of applied science to work in.

Should Be Cautioned.

There is a boy who rides a motor cycle that scares more horses than all the automobiles that have ever visited our city. He seems to take in every street when he starts. One minute he darts across Main to one of the back streets, watch a moment and you will see him dart across Main a square off and so on until he has done all the cross streets, and he don't care whether he scares anyone's horse or not. There is considerable complaint about him.

Prize List Issued.

Despite a monetary loss due to rainy weather last year, the directors of the Blue Grass Fair have agreed upon a premium list carrying even larger value than that offered in 1906. The aggregate of the premiums to be given will amount to very nearly $30,000. The classifications have been so arranged that there can be no possible confusion on the part of exhibitors and judges. Breeding and show classes have been entirely separated. For each, liberal appropriations have been made, and different judges will preside in the different exhibitions. A preliminary prize list, setting forth in full all the classifications for live stock, has just been issued. It is pronounced the best prize list ever issued by any fair association in America, not excepting the largest and most prominent State fairs. Copies of it will be mailed to all prospective exhibitors upon request to J. J. Shouse, Secretary, Lexington, Ky.

Estes-Haley.

The residence of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Estes, near Clintonville, was the scene Wednesday at 4:30 o'clock of a pretty wedding when their charming and attractive daughter, Miss Ada, was united in marriage to Mr. Kelly Haley. The parlor and reception hall were tastefully decorated with flowers and as the opening chords of Lohengrin's Bridal Chorus sounded the bridal party came from the hall. Mr. Isaac C. Haley, brother of the bridegroom, and Mr. Orrin Estes, brother of the bride, entered first, followed by the bride and groom. As a bridal party formed a semi-circle they were met by Elder S. W. Willis, the officiating minister, who performed the ceremony in an impressive manner. The bride was lovely in her wedding gown of white silk and carried a bouquet of white roses. After the benediction and congratulations the bridal party and the immediate relatives of the contracting parties were entertained at dinner at the residence of the bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Haley.

Notice To Patrons And Pupils Of Paris Public Schools.

All pupils who fell below 50 per cent. in any branch (in the grades below the High School) must be able to raise such grade next fall at which time an examination will be given so that the pupils may go on with their class. This is much better than going over the whole course again and thus falling behind their classmates.

The High School pupils are promoted by studies, this they are required to make 75 or more on each branch. So if any student of the High School has fallen below 75 per cent. he must either be prepared to raise his grade in such study or take it over again next year.

While I do not believe in the pupil being forced to do much studying during vacation, I do believe it much better to finish up the work that ought to have been done this year than to be compelled to do it all over next year.

Should any parents or pupils desire to consult me in regard to this work, I shall be glad to confer with them this week at my office in the court house. Respectfully,

G. W. CHAPMAN,
Superintendent.

About Something To Ride In.

We would like to have you come to our repository, examine our vehicles carefully and get our prices before going or sending money to some other point for vehicles. We do not agree to sell any vehicle for $25 to $50 less than it is worth, as some firms advertise, nor do we guarantee goods for an unreasonable time. We do, however, guarantee our goods to be exactly as we represent them, to be worth every dollar we ask for them and we are here to fulfill the guarantee that the factories place upon them. We also agree to furnish any grade of vehicle as cheap or cheaper than that same grade will cost anywhere else. We handle such goods as have proven themselves good and if you buy from us you may rest assured you have the full value of your money. Give us a call.
